

Abstract

A circuit and related method for digital volume control are provided, where the circuit includes a digital filter configured to process samples of an input stream in a manner that processes a previous input sample during a time interval before a subsequent input sample, and outputs a series of exponentially decaying waveforms. The result is an exponential response to a volume change made by a user, where the change feels more pleasant and natural than a conventional linear response.